About the Speaker:
At Stanley Ho East Asia College of the University of Macau, Dr. Wan designs and delivers general education courses and student development programs for inter-disciplinary students of the College; gives advice to College student bodies and students on their activity organization, study and career; and serves as members of ad-hoc committees for the overall residential college system of the University. She obtained her bachelor’s and master’s degrees from The University of Hong Kong in Hong Kong. She completed a Ph.D. in human geography at the London School of Economics & Political Science, United Kingdom. She has developed strong expertise in student development, service-learning, experiential learning, and community-university partnerships. She has presented at various international and regional conferences on both geography and education. Her recent research interests include service-learning, as well as student leadership and development.